Evidence and investigation: The truth behind missing and murdered Indigenous women in Canada

TRAUMATIC CONSEQUENCES

In proportion to their population, Indigenous people are significantly overrepresented in Canada’s criminal justice system. Indigenous women are far more likely to be victimized than other women. The causes of both imbalances stem from historic government policies (for example, Indian residential schools, the Indian Act), which were aimed at assimilation, cultural destruction, and territorial dispossession. The result has been severe intergenerational trauma. This trauma has contributed to dysfunctional environments and higher crime rates, wherein Indigenous women are stereotyped, marginalized, and victimized in Canadian society and Indigenous communities.

The consequences are catastrophic, as shown by higher rates of Indigenous mortality, suicide, abuse, poverty, homelessness, illness, and addiction. Quality of life, health, housing, education, and employment are all significantly lower for Indigenous people than for those in Canada’s general population. Socio-economic marginalization of victims and poverty are roots of victimization. Indigenous women face the double disadvantage of gender stereotypes and racial discrimination (Aboriginal Healing Foundation 2004, 2008; Bombay, Matheson, and Anisman 2009; Erasmus and Sanders 1992; Haskell and Randall 2009; Rice and Snyder 2008; Wesley-Esquimaux 2007).

URGENT NEED FOR STUDIES

The phenomenon of missing and murdered Indigenous women has been dismissed by the current government of Canada as constituting nothing more than a series of criminal events. Rather than heed calls for a national inquiry, the government has taken a piecemeal approach that does little to recognize or address the seriousness of the matter. I argue that this approach is consistent with the current government’s approach to Indigenous issues across the country. There is an urgent need for full statistical evidence on missing and murdered Indigenous women to reduce this epidemic. There are no studies that provide complete data on missing and murdered Indigenous women. The RCMP released a report in 2014 with data covering 1980 through 2012. These data indicate that 1,181 Indigenous women went missing or were murdered during this time frame: 164 are missing, while 1,017 were victims of homicide. The RCMP report concedes that Indigenous women are overrepresented among all women. Indeed, the report concluded that “the total number of murdered and missing [Indigenous] females exceeds previous public estimates” (RCMP 2014). Most telling are the data reflected in Table 1, which highlight the degrees of overrepresentation of Indigenous female homicide victims in each province and territory.

The rates of female Indigenous homicides are much higher in the western provinces and northern territories. Indigenous populations are higher in these provinces, as highlighted in recent Canadian census data. The most recent Socio-economic marginalization of victims and poverty are roots of victimization.

TABLE 1  Female Homicides, 1980–2012

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Province/territory</th>
<th>Indigenous</th>
<th>Non-Indigenous</th>
<th>Unknown</th>
<th>Indigenous victim proportion</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>NL</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>57</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>15%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PE</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NS</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>163</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NB</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>125</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>QC</td>
<td>46</td>
<td>1,445</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ON</td>
<td>114</td>
<td>1,901</td>
<td>48</td>
<td>6%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MB</td>
<td>196</td>
<td>188</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>49%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SK</td>
<td>153</td>
<td>116</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>55%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>AB</td>
<td>206</td>
<td>533</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>28%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BC</td>
<td>205</td>
<td>890</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>19%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>YT</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>56%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NT</td>
<td>47</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>92%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NU</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>100%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>1,017</td>
<td>5,439</td>
<td>95</td>
<td>16%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TABLE 2 Indigenous Identity by Province/Territory

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Province/territory</th>
<th>Indigenous identity population</th>
<th>Indigenous proportion of population</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>NL</td>
<td>35,800</td>
<td>7.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PE</td>
<td>2,230</td>
<td>1.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NS</td>
<td>33,845</td>
<td>3.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NB</td>
<td>22,615</td>
<td>3.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>QC</td>
<td>141,915</td>
<td>1.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ON</td>
<td>301,425</td>
<td>2.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MB</td>
<td>195,900</td>
<td>16.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SK</td>
<td>157,740</td>
<td>15.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>AB</td>
<td>220,695</td>
<td>6.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BC</td>
<td>232,920</td>
<td>5.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>YT</td>
<td>7,705</td>
<td>23.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NT</td>
<td>21,160</td>
<td>51.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NU</td>
<td>27,360</td>
<td>86.3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

National Household Survey of 2011 indicates that 4.3 percent of the entire Canadian population self-identifies as Indigenous. The provincial and territorial population breakdown is provided in Table 2. Given that Indigenous women constitute approximately half of those who self-identify as Indigenous, and thus half of the numbers shown in Table 2, most of the Indigenous female homicide rates in Table 1 are significantly higher than the population proportions of Indigenous women in each province or territory.

IGNORED REPORTS

Why is this so? The dearth of previous studies on missing and murdered Indigenous women reflects broader systemic stereotypes in Canadian society. The Native Women’s Association of Canada (NWAC) conducted extensive research and consultation as part of its Sisters in Spirit initiative, culminating in a final report submitted to the Department of Justice in 2011 (NWAC 2011a). As part of her doctoral dissertation, Maryanne Pearce presented an extensive study with new data on victims in 2013. One month after the release of the RCMP report in March 2014, the House of Commons Special Committee on Violence Against Indigenous Women released a report. The government ignored this latter report’s recommendation for a public inquiry (Bar-}

When a government turns a matter over for public consideration and review, it is indicating the sheer significance of an issue or problem and its own dedication to achieve meaningful change.

[...]
Evidence and investigation continued from page 11

ing criminal justice. Fourth, they provide a level of independent and objective review and analysis at a much more extensive level than other reports or studies may achieve because they are granted broad powers under their enabling legislation. Fifth, they provide informed public policy recommendations and suggestions for progressive reform. Sixth, public inquiries have the power to reveal causes and consequences of significant public problems (Ipperwash Inquiry 2007, vol. 3, 2). Finally, when a government turns a matter over for public consideration and review, it is indicating the sheer significance of an issue or problem and its own dedication to achieve meaningful change. The fact that the current federal government continues to fight against a public inquiry undermines broader objectives to address the epidemic of missing and murdered Indigenous women. It also speaks volumes about the government’s approach to Indigenous peoples and their quality of life across the country. This must stop, and it must stop now.

WORKS CITED

Historic trauma and Aboriginal healing. Ottawa: Aboriginal Healing Foundation.

Aboriginal Healing Foundation. 2008.

Carlson, Kathryn Blaze, and Renata D’Aliesio. 2015. Planned Canadian DNA data bank will fall short of gold standard as tool in search for missing indigenous women.

Galloway, Gloria. 2015. 70 per cent of murdered Aboriginal women killed by Indigenous men: RCMP.

Pearce, Maryanne. 2013. An awkward silence: Missing and murdered vulnerable women and the Canadian justice system (doctoral dissertation, Faculty of Law, University of Ottawa).

Rice, Brian, and Anna Snyder. 2008.
Reconciliation in the context of a settler society: Healing the legacy of colonialism in Canada. In From truth to reconciliation: Transforming the legacy of residential schools, ed. Aboriginal Healing Foundation, 45–63. Ottawa: Aboriginal Healing Foundation.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police. 2014.

Special Committee on Violence Against Indigenous Women.

Wesley-Esquimaux, Cynthia. 2007. 